

North Carolina residents with a print disability could qualify to receive free accessible books as well as additional accessible library services.

A print disability may be a visual impairment, a physical impairment that makes holding a book difficult, or a reading disability.

Accessible books come in audio, large print, and braille formats. Additionally, patrons can use their smart phone to download braille and audio books through the BARD app.

Accessible library services include reader advisory services, machine repair, library technology support, as well as state-wide library programs.
